Ebony & Ivory - Safeguarding Classified

By John Hille, ISP

My wife and I have a framed picture by photographer Ron Kimball where he posed a full size Black Panther atop a White Grand Piano, paws off the front edge above the eighty-eights. The Ebony on Ivory is a striking contrast in the study of Black & White. Seems our world is full of opposites in which we face choices on a daily basis. Political, military, finical, with fries or without fries; right – wrong – up – down – a world polarized. We all know the drill; choose. Some choices are within themselves equal and opposite, like a magnet. North and South poles both attract and repel. Does the right hand know what the left is doing? Not always, especially when we talk security.

Classified, Unclassified, Sensitive, SBU, FOUO, SECRET, “Top Secret”; what are we doing? We as a company are made up of many individuals working with components not so black & white, yet like the magnet, some pieces come together and some must stay separate. Determining why, when and where is the choice being made. Is the right hand authorized to work with the left? Is there the proper clearance level? Is there a need-to-know? It’s not black & white is it? Or is it? Like most activities, safeguarding classified information is a series of choices you make based on a predetermined set of guidelines. Those guidelines establish working conditions within which the right and left hands are authorized to work together and outside of which they are not. Every classified contract has a set of guidelines called a DD-254, attached to help clarify our choices when working with the information. Trying to make decisions without the guidelines boggles the mind. The DD-254 removes the gray area from the picture and gives us an absolute clear black & white working environment. Oh yes, remember if the right side of the brain controls the left side of the body then only left handed people are in their right mind.

Guidelines & Opportunities to be Heard

The Chief Security Officer Guideline has been updated for 2008. In June 2008, ANSI approved the second edition of ASIS International's Standards Development Procedures. The Security, Preparedness and Continuity (SPC) Standards Community is forming and seeks assistance. Checkout the SPC Committee Member Invitation to provide input on two American National Standards: ASIS.SPC.1-200X and ASIS.SPC.2-200X. Last, but not least, consider participating in the Military Liaison Council's survey. More information is available from the June Quick Links email sent out on the 5th.
